Abstract

Risk Factors of Coronary Heart Disease and Correlates of Type 2 Diabetes
among Cuban Americans

by

Subrata D. Nath

The differences in the risk factors of coronary heart disease (CHD) and the predictors of type 2 diabetes were investigated among Cuban Americans with (N=79) and without (N=80) type 2 diabetes using a cross-sectional study design. Data on socioeconomic status, smoking, physical activity, dietary intake, and angina symptoms were collected using validated standardized questionnaires. Anthropometrics and blood pressure (BP) were recorded. Glucose, glycated hemoglobin, lipid profile, homocysteine, and C-reactive protein were assessed in fasting blood.

Diabetics reported a significantly higher rate of angina symptoms than non-diabetics (P=0.008). After adjusting for age and gender, diabetics had significantly (P<0.001) higher mean waist circumference and mean systolic BP than non-diabetics. There was no significant difference in nutrient intakes and physical activity levels between the groups. After adjusting for age and gender, diabetics had significantly (P<0.001) higher mean serum levels of triglycerides and homocysteine than non-diabetics. In contrast, diabetics had significantly (P<0.01) lower levels of high-density lipoprotein cholesterol (HDL-C) than non-diabetics. In multiple linear regression, several modifiable lifestyle habits were the independent predictors of these CHD risk factors.

Multivariate logistic regression analyses showed that increased age, male gender, larger waist circumference, lack of acculturation, increased intake of percent calories from protein, and higher serum levels of triglycerides were the independent risk factors for diabetes among the study participants. In contrast, increased intake of fiber and moderate alcohol consumption conferred protection against diabetes.

The study concluded that Cuban Americans with diabetes have a greater number of CHD risk factors compared to those without diabetes. Several modifiable lifestyle factors are associated with the risk of diabetes. Culturally sensitive public health measures are needed to reduce the burden of diabetes and CHD in this high-risk minority population.

IRB/IACUC APPROVAL

FIU Institutional Review Board (IRB) must approve all research projects involving human subjects and the FIU Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee (IACUC) must approve all projects involving animal research conducted by anyone affiliated with the University, including graduate students, before such research begins.

In an effort to assure compliance with these policies, we are requesting that all graduate students whose thesis or dissertation involves human subjects or animal research attach a copy of the IRB or IACUC memorandum of approval when submitting Form M2 (Master's Thesis Proposal) or Form D3 (Doctoral Dissertation Proposal) to this office. As usual the student should also include his or her proposal with the form.

Any questions regarding IRB/ IACUC procedures should be directed to your college IRB/ IACUC representative at (305) 348-2494/ E-mail: irbiacuc@fiu.edu. Application and other materials and information can be obtained from <http://research.fiu.edu/irb/>.

ENROLLMENT IN THESIS OR DISSERTATION CREDIT HOURS

A student working on a dissertation needs to be continuously enrolled (including the summer term) until he or she submits the manuscript to our office for approval. Doctoral students need to be enrolled for at least 3 dissertation credit hours.

Doctoral students must register for dissertation credit hours after advancing to doctoral candidacy by filing D2 (Program for Doctoral Degree and Application for Candidacy) in our office.

For Graduate Policies, please refer to <http://gradschool.fiu.edu/facultystaff/#gradpolicies>

INFORMATION ON BINDING YOUR THESIS/DISSERTATION

Some departments require their students to provide additional bound copies. Please check with your department to see if there are such requirements. In addition, many students also want to bind a number of copies for personal use.

For your convenience we are listing two companies, Boca Bookbinding and International Assets, that have agreed to provide special pricing for binding personal copies. Several of the companies listed below have provided samples of the finished products. These samples are kept in the University Graduate School office and are available for your inspection.

There might be other companies in the area who are willing to provide this service so feel free to shop around. Also, soft binding is available through the copy center on campus.

Note: Neither FIU nor the University Graduate School are responsible for the work of binding companies.
